

1

At the 2000 population census, only ever-married women were asked the question regarding the number of children ever born. Since non-marital childbearing is still very rare in South Korea, we made an assumption that all never-married women are childless, and included them in the category of parity 0 (see also section 4.2 in the Background and Documentation file for South Korea).